5. Description of 3 Day Activities

During implementation, 3 sessions took place:

- 1st day, we started doing a little presentation first of participants and then of the Art Beyond Gaze project.

After this we create a collective large format paint asking the children to freely represent whatever they felt or imagined at that moment. We made available to them different materials so that they could choose for themselves which one to use. The choice of the technique to be used was also free.

- 2nd day, at the beginning the participants resumed the work started during the previous meeting. In the second part we went out into the park, with the support of tutors and operators, first imagined and then created a signboard for the ASD VIVA association. In addition to using brushes, the guys also used their hands to paint or sponges, glasses, exploring different techniques.

- 3rd day, during the final session of our workshops, the participants have finished the collective creation of the signboard for the ASD VIVA association. the workshop ended with the final assessment.

6. Outcomes & Evaluation of the Teaching

The questionnaires were administered to the participants in paper form and then the data was entered into the specially created Google Form.

The majority of users gave the workshop a very positive rating, assigning scores from 4 to 5 by answering the question related to general satisfaction.

The operators who participated in the three days were enthusiastic and said that in the future they will adopt the techniques and methods learned in their work. The strength that has been most frequently identified by the students is that they have carried out activities that have allowed everyone to express themselves freely not only in content but also in form.

7. Conclusions

The second Local Workshop was aimed at testing how the different techniques learned in the C2 training activities could attract a young audience and if they could facilitate an inclusive work that did not exclude any participants.

The results obtained by the assessment appears fully in line with one of the main objectives of the workshop specifically and of the project in general: the creation of an inclusive approach to art, which can be accessible to anyone.

All the guys enjoyed to participate to the workshops and the activities and the methodology were perceived extremely useful and captivating also from the point of view of the operators.

What the boys particularly liked was also being able to create a product that represented them all together, to be used even beyond the end of the workshops (the signboard).
